故事改編自 Vern Kousky

Once upon a time, there was an owl, Otto. One night, he had an idea for a poem, the very first of his own!

Dear Moon, you must be lonely
So high up in the sky.
I'm sure your heart's so heavy,
Sometimes you want to cry.
But dear Moon, please do not worry.
I've a message here to send:
I'm with you every evening.
Dear Moon, you're my best friend!

Otto was surprised to see lots of tiny faces look up at him. He was even more surprised to hear lots of tiny voices shouting, "More! More!" So Otto delighted the mice with another poem.

Otto now knows he should share more than just the moon and the stars. He should share with everyone. When Otto saw other owls, he did not run and hide anymore. He said, "I'm nobody! Whooo are you? Are you nobody, too?" The more the owls listened, the more they cheered. When Otto finished his poem, they all shouted, "More! More! Whoo! Whoo!"

35~36 題

It was the inter-school sports day and my school was fighting with three other schools. The competition was the boys' relay race. All four teams took their place on the starting line. I was running for my school. We were holding our batons, ready to start running. Everyone was waiting for the loud 'BANG' to start the race. But just before the starter pulled the trigger, one of the boys on the blue team ran early. It was a false start. My heart was racing quickly because I was shocked. We all took our places again and got ready to run. However, the same boy made another false start. That meant the boy and his team had to leave the race. I felt very sorry for the boy and his team but that was the rule. We took our place on the starting line again. This time we all waited for the loud 'BANG'. I ran as fast as I could and handed the baton to the next runner. It was a very close race but my team was the last to get to the finish line. We were not the winners that day, but it was still a wonderful day. I did feel very sorry for the boy with two false starts. He lost a chance to experience the joy of racing with other people.

39~41 題

This morning, there was a whale on the beach dying because of 32 kg of trash in its stomach. Many people tried to save it. Sadly, it died after half an hour.

About 32kg of plastic trash killed a young blue whale. Scientists found the young dying whale because the waves washed it up in southeast Spain. The whale's body landed in Cape Palos this morning, died because people found there were many pieces of plastic trash, fishing nets, and garbage bags in its stomach. These kinds of things are hard for animals to digest. The young whale was not able to digest the garbage. This is why the young blue whale died. This poor animal ate too much trash in the sea because it couldn't tell food from trash.

There are more than 150 whales that stranded themselves on Western Australian beaches. Scientists in Australia even found a plastic drum in the whale's stomach. Our litter makes these sea animals become worse and worse. A local environmental group showed a photo of how underweight a whale when he died. That means the whale couldn't eat anything because its stomach was full of trash.

The world is our home. To save our world, we have to reduce, reuse and recycle. To reduce, we have to make less waste. To reuse, we have to use both sides of paper. To recycle, we have to put paper, glass, bottles and plastics in the right boxes at home. In this way, we can save sea animals AND our Mother Earth.
